

TEACHING FELLOWSHIP 2019-2020

Applications are invited for a Teaching Fellowship in Economic History to provide teaching for undergraduates in the Faculty of Economics for one year beginning in October 2019. This is not a full-time position.

Part I Paper 5: British Economic History

The Faculty wishes to appoint a Teaching Fellow for Part I Paper 5 (British Economic History). The Teaching Fellow will be required to give supervisions in groups of six and mark all assignments for each supervision. He or she would be paid by colleges in the normal way (current rate is £44.46 per hour for groups of 6). The Faculty would, in addition, pay a retainer of £3000 for a Teaching Fellow with a standard teaching load of 60 hours (but proportional for less or more than 60 hours.) There may also be duties related to teaching support, as directed by the paper co-ordinator.

Facilities for Teaching Fellows include free printing of supervision material.

For further information please contact the Director of Teaching, Dr Pontus Rendahl (rpk22@cam.ac.uk), or the Professor of Economic History, Professor Sheilagh Ogilvie (sco2@econ.cam.ac.uk).

Those newly appointed will be required to attend a Faculty training session on small-group teaching just prior to the beginning of the Michaelmas Term, 10.00 till 1.00 on Tuesday 8 October 2019.

Any University of Cambridge graduate student applying for one of these Fellowships should first discuss their intention with their supervisor, provide a statement to the effect that their supervisor is supportive of their taking a Teaching Fellow position, and attach it with their application.

Applications by letter and curriculum vitae, giving relevant experience, should be submitted electronically to Silvana Dean, Teaching Administrative Officer, Faculty of Economics as soon as possible and at latest by Tuesday 10 September 2019. E-mail: sd207@cam.ac.uk
